

Sunday 2nd

September 1666

The fire started in the night in the king's bakers shop
in Pudding Lane.

The baker and his family escaped over the roofs. The servant girl died because she was afraid of heights.

Monday 3rd

September 1666

The fire got bigger,
the wind blew it.

Samuel Pepys went to see the king. The mayor tried to put the fire out but he could not.

Tuesday 4th

September 1666

The people threw their things out of the windows, they saved their babies and their gold. The people went on the boats on the river Thames. Lots of houses were burnt.

Wednesday 5th

September 1666.

The fire was still spreading. The king, Charles 2nd, sent for the Duke of York. The Duke of York blew up the houses with gunpowder and it worked.

Thursday 6th

September 1666

The fire was out but the ground was very hot. The city was very bare. The people of London were outside the city camped in the fields. The king and the rich people took food and things for them.
